July 24, 1897.

We have a horse with one foot partly cut off and without New York Fly Fluid we would not have known how to protect him from the torture of flies. The fluid so far as tested seems to be of great value as a protector to animals.

A VOYAGE IN THE AIR. l'eculiar Sensations That Come While Ascending and Descending In a Balloon. I made an ascent in the gigantic balloon which toward the end of the sixting had been brought over by a number of well known French aeronauts, Messrs. Yon, Godard, Mangin, Chavantier and Tissandier. Mr. Glaisher, the celebrated meteor-ologist, who in one of his ascents had attained the greatest height, seven miles, took the direction of the enormous airship on that occasion. Shortly before a balloon of moderate extent had been brought to England by Mr. Giffard. I was accidentally prevented from accepting the invitation to take part in the ascent. On the next day the balloon exploded through a

When we ascended afterward in the great captive balloon, the volume of which was no less than 424,000 cubic feet and its height 121 feet, during such stormy weather that Mr. Glaisher thought at first the enterprise should be given up on that day, we had rather a strange experience. At a great altitude we were bumped about so badly and at such suddenly changing and precipitous angles that one of the passengers near mo was seized with an insano kind of giddiness. All at once he felt an irresistible impulse to throw himself overboard into the ocean of the air! He was pulled down by those about him, whereupon he sank sideways on his knees, his eyes being then shut in as by blinkers. . There were no seats in the car. We stood like so many bottles is the narrow wickerwork ring, which only reached to the lowor part of one's breast, and which was hollowed out in the middle, so that the ever shifting landscape could be seen through it, rather a trying aspect for those given to seasickness. The altitude reached was such that the manifold sounds below gradually merged into a music of the spheres and then into absolute stillness.

The jerky movements of the airship became at last so abrupt that the danger signal had to be hung out. The hideous part of the voyage was the coming down. It was effected in short but violent pushes. and one felt ever and anon as if the head were thrust into the stomach. For all that, I greatly enjoyed the trip .- Karl

AMERICAN PRONUNCIATION.

Blind in North American Review.

Two Words by Which the Citizen Is Recognized by Foreigners. The American traveling abroad is sure to be "spotted" by English and English speaking people by two words that he or she is sure to pronounce at least once in the course of any given hour. One word is "America" and the other is "Paris." Not 1 American in 10,000 ever learns to speak them correctly. "Amurrika" and "Parrus" is the way they actually sound to foreign cars whether the speaker's birthplaco be Boston, Chicago, New York, San Francisco or Atlanta. Other circumstances being equal, more attention is paid to pronunciation in the education of an English than an American boy or girl. If they learn nothing else about America little Miss and Master Bull learn to divide the word properly into its syllables thus: A-me-ri-ca; not as the American ear and throat are trained to hear and voice it, "A-mer-ri-ca." The English also learn to say "Paris" with a little roll to the r; not a Gallie roll, but the r is spoken with the tip of the tongue near the teeth instead of being flattened against the roof of the mouth, while the i is not transformed into a u, but takes the short e sound, which is its real value. Hess Manufacturing Co., It is not long since Americans, well bred MANUFACTURERS OF THE and otherwise, spoke of "Eye-talians."

The better part of them have outgrown that barbarism, and perhaps some day the American car will recognize the barbarity of "Amurrika."—New York Mail and Express. Who Made the First Jokes. A correspondent of the Cloveland Plain Dealer wrote to that newspaper requesting information concerning the seven original jokes upon which all modern humor is said to be founded. The editor admits swer and then remarks: If it were a question of fundamental subjects of humor, instead of the actual jokes themselves, the task of rooting them out might not be so difficult. Perhaps we may learn later on that Epictetus had prepared a list of 13 Hellenic subjects for mirth in which the original seven were included. Then we may be told that Dysippus, the Thracian, took Epictetus sharply to task because he omitted the goat, the animal being a valued Thracian product. Perhaps Simonis, the philosopher, can be credited with putting official approval on the mother-in-law, the mouse and the mule. Perhaps the spring poet, the milliner's bill, the tongue of woman, the waking of the baby and the young man asking the dreaded father for his daugh ter's hand came in a few cycles later. That's more than seven, of course, bu they were not all fundamental. And when you stop to consider this point it might be well to ask where the bicycle joke comes from? Oh, yes, here it is. You remember that exquisite bit of humor of the conse quential fly on Jove's chariot wheel-and there you have the original cycle joke. Not That Kind of Cricket. A lady in search of a birthday present for her son walked up and down a book shop, closely scanning the titles of the books. At last she picked up a volume and handed it to the assistant. "Is this a good book?" she asked. "An excellent book, madam," replied the young man as he wrapped it up, "and the only copy we have left.'

"How fortunate I am to have secured it. then!" the delighted purchaser exclaimed. "My son is just crazy over the game, and I wanted to get a good authority on it, so that he could learn to play it properly. The shop assistant looked dazed as he handed his customer the copy of Charles Dickens' "Cricket on the Hearth," and she had been gone some time before it dawned upon him what a mistake he had No one knows what the boy said .- Short

She Likes to Cook.

Mrs. Ruth McEnery Stuart is as noted among her friends for her culinary accom plishments as for her literary ability. She delights in concocting dainty dishes and finds much recreation from mental labor in preparing a salad or a ragout. A Charitable Order That Has Flourishe In Florence For Six Centuries. Mrs. Rebecca Harding Davis contributes to St. Nicholas an article entitled "In Old Florence," telling of an American boy who visited the quaint Italian city. Mrs. Davis

Ponto Vecchio, a bridge, gray with age, which spans the Arno. Rows of goldsmiths' shops cling along its edges like branches to a ship's side, and trays heaped with cheap rings or jewels worth a king's ransom line the sidewalks. Just as they reached it a sudden startling silence fell upon the crowd. Across the bridge came a noiseless procession of men in black gowns and cowls. The cowls covered their faces, two holes being cut for their eyes to look through. They carried a sick man upon a bler and passed through the sunshine silently as shadows. All traffic stopped to make way for the procession; many of the Italians muttered prayer for the poor burden, crossing When they were gone, Tom felt that it was time for some missionary work and "They are not his relatives," said Hugo quickly. "It is not mumming. You don't understand. It was a boy, like us, who started the work 600 years ago. He said every Christian man should be ready to help every other man-to nurse the sick or bury the dead without reward or praise. He and his companions were called the Brothers of Pity, and the order has been at work here in Florence ever since. All kinds of men belong. They never talk of it, but they are ready at a moment's call. They wear the black gown and hood that nobody may know them or praise them for their charity. Those men who passed just now may have been laborers or great Florentine nobles. Only God knows them." "How are they paid?" "Paid! They are never paid. They can ake nothing from those they serve but a drink of cold water." "And that thing has been going on for six centuries!" said Tom. "We tire of things in six years! Besides an American pays taxes to support an almshouse for paupers. He does not nurse and bury them himself."

"No," said Hugo gently, "the methods are different. I suppose we seem like chil-dren compared to the wide awake Americans. But these old customs were invented to teach us great truths before we could read or write, just as you show a child pictures to teach him things. We keep them still."

WOMEN FOLK OF THE SENATE.

Ingenuous and Amusing Remarks Often Addressed to Those In Official Society. Mary Nimmo Balentine, writing of the 'Women of the United States Senate" in The Woman's Home Companion, tells some amusing incidents in the experiences of senatorial families which require great tact and self command to be passed over without contretemps:

"Women whose husbands and fathers are in political life enjoy interesting experiences and meet with curious people at times. The wife of a prominent senator, who is also the daughter of a senator, recalls with much mirth the days of her father's campaign. She and her sister used to accompany him when he went to make speeches, and, wrapped in waterproof cloaks, the young ladies would mingle with the crowd to hear the comments of were feared for their funmaking proclivi-The elder was invited once to visit with her father a valued constituent whose farm was near the county town. They went and enjoyed the day fully, visited the county fair and were interested in all they saw. At night when the young lady had retired to her room and was partially undressed there came a knock at the door. She peeped out and saw the daughter of the house. " 'May I come in?'

" 'Certainly,' replied the other, opening the door. " 'Do you know I was awfully afraid to have you come here?'

'Why, then, did you ask me to come?' "'Oh, your pa and my pa are such friends that I couldn't help it. But I just made up my mind that if you acted a bit stuck up or put on any airs over us I was just bound to tell you of it. I'm right glad now that you did come.' This frank certificate of amiability was much prized by the recipient."

The Ways of Wives. Beware of the wife who as she kisses you goodby slips a bit of paper into your pocket, saying: "There's a list of a few little things I'd like you to get on your way home. Please don't overlook any of them. It will only take you a few moments, and I want all of them today. There's a dear." Jenkins has such a wife. He takes the little slip and says:

"Yes, my dear; I'll get them." He gives himself ten minutes to catch the train for home, and this is the list: "Six lemons, a dozen oranges, yard of blue ribbon, dozen shirt buttons, bottle of ipecacuanha, bunch of celery, bottle of vanilla extract, pound of almonds, pound of moist sugar, yard of white cambric, shilling's worth of chamois leather, box of glycerin jujubes for baby's cough, card of hooks and eyes, figs, dates, yard of lace like sample, shoestrings for Johnnie, packet of pins, piece of blue dress braid and something for baby." He arrives home with two lemons and an orange and looks unutterable things when Mrs. Jenkins says: "You didn't have time to get the other things? Why, my dear, I could have bought them all in ten minutes."-Pearson's Weekly.

Things l'eople Worry Over. "Some people worry over one thing, some over another," said Mr. Nobbleton, "but I think perhaps that more of us are disturbed by debt than by any other one thing. Troubles of one sort and another we 'rastle with pretty well, especially the troubles of other people. And we get over a sickness and come around again chipper as birds and laughing before we know it. We can stub our too or receive even more sorious bodily injuries, and yet recover our natural buoyancy. But debt is the heaviest load of all. A man in debt uses up all his strength carrying that load, and has none left wherewith to get ahead. "If I had any young friends just about starting out in life, I should say to them: "'My son, whatever else you do don't get into debt.' "-New York Sun.

"I've a great story to tell you, boys," said a man to a group at the city hall. "1

don't think any of you ever heard me tell "Is it a really good one?" asked one of the party doubtfully. "It certainly is." "Then you never told it before," echoed the crowd.-Philadelphia Call.

"Popper," said Willie, "why dld you buy a golf cont?" "To play golf in, my son," said Mr. "Did you need it?" "Of course I did." "Then I need a topcoat to play tops in. I seen 'em advertised."-Harper's Bazar.

In France, as in Germany, boys are first ent to gymnasiums when they are 12 or 13 years of age and spend five or six years in study and under discipline that is much more severe than is that of the preparatory

DROPPING FROM A TOP STORY. An Experience That Was Not Altogether

Disagreeable. A couple of tourists were in the top of the Washington monument the other day, and, as everybody else does at that giddy height, they talked of the discomforts of a fall. At least one of them did. The other listened to him awhile.

"I am willing to admit," he said, "that a drop of 500 feet to a stone pavement is not a pleasant thing to think about, but I am a witness to testify that a more de lightful death could scarcely be imagined.' "Were you ever killed that way?" inquired the other in a tone of doubt. "Not exactly, but I went through all the motions." "How do you mean?"

"Listen. Fifteen years ago or thereabouts I was holding down a job in the old Gazette building in Cincinnati, a six story structure, which was considered a skyscraper in those days. I was 25 years old then and not in as good fix as I am now, and I did not kick when the boss told me to wash the windows on the top floor. I was doing very well at it and had got myself seated nicely on the sill, rubbing away at the glass, when I lost my balance in some way and out I went. not clear to me. There was certainly no sense or knowledge that I was falling out of a top story window and would be crushed to death below.

'When consciousness came again I was at home, and it was 24 hours after the fall. I did not even know, when I came to, what had happened. They told me I had fallen from the sixth story window and that I had struck on the roof of a low shed in the back area, which had broken the fall and saved my life. This shed roof was made of boards without support except at the ends, and I had gone through them to the pavement below. That I was not killed was only the luck I didn't even break a bone, but I got a shake up that kept me in bed for two weeks and made me sore for three months. This monument is some higher than that building, but I fancy the feeling in falling is about the same."-Washington Star.

ORIGIN OF LIBERIA. How the African Colony Came to Be Independent Nation. The American Colonization society i should be a refuge for American negroes. This government voted $30,000 and a ship for the purpose. A settlement was made on the west coast of Africa. The society framed a constitution for the colony, placing all power in the society's agents. The settlers objected, and from time to time new constitutions were promulgated, until finally only the ultimate veto power was lodged in the society, all other civil powers having been granted to the colo-

In 1846 disputes arose with the British of Sierra Leone, regarding the payment of duties. Britain took the ground that the colony was no nation, therefore the society surrendered all governmental powers, and soon after, in July, 1847, the negroes of Liberia adopted a declaration of independence and a free constitution. Its independence was acknowledged by all the great nations in 1848-9, this country excepted. Not till 1861 did the United States recognize it as a nation. The name Li beria was given by the society. Its meaning is evident. The government of the republic is fashioned upon our own, with president, cabinet, two houses and a supreme court .- New York Press.

Payn as an Anecdotist. Payn was superlative as an anecdotist. Good stories seemed to have a natural instinct for resorting to him. Often as I used to see him I always thought myself defrauded if I did not come away with some fresh and amusing narrative. On such occasions my family found me out and used to reproach me if I did not bring back some telling anecdote. It must clearly be my own fault. I was certainly not he rose, but I had been near the rose. Payn's fertility in this respect no doubt implied more study than might be obvious to his readers. He was fond of the literature in which such harvests are to be eaped, and "crammed," if I may say so, for his work conscientiously, though more it seemed, from spontaneous delight in it than from deliberate purpose. And, then, the charm of his talk and his hearty sociability made it a duty for every one to help him and to repay him as far as possible in kind The man bursting with a good story found a special pleasure in pouring it into so responsive an ear, and Payn became a perpetually flowing fountain of delighftul talk.—Leslie Stephen in Summary Conversion. Hawaiians all became "Christians" through the simple process of an edictkapoo-of one of the sturdy old Kamehamehas. That worthy king, observing that it was easier to kill an enemy with a rifle than with a club, and that the rifle was the invention of the Christians, took a short cut through the theological mazes of the missionaries who were trying to convert his subjects, and announced that the language were from that moment all Hawaiians were from that moment Christians. As he added that he would knock on the head any who objected, the thing was done as fast as his couriers could deliver his message to his loving subjects.-New York World.

Disraeli's epigrams were pointed and doubled edged, and this one, given by Mr. George Russell in his diary, is about as sharp as Disraeli could make it. Some one had asked Disraeli if he had read the Greville memoirs. Now, there never had been much amity between him and the Grevilles, and so he said: "I do not feel attracted to them. I knew the author, and he was the most conceited person with whom I have been brought in contact, although I have read Cicerc and known Bulwer Lytton."

A Chance. "But how could you have the heart to hang a man for stealing a $10 horsef" sked the tourist. "Fer two reasons," Rubberneck Bill explained. "They wasn't nothin else to ang him fer, an they wasn't nobody else landy to hang."—Cincinnati Enquirer. All things come around to those who
